Gabriel's Wharf Beach Clean

DOC Cleaning colleagues recently joined representatives from CBRE and the South Bank Employers' Group for a beach clean at Gabriel's Wharf, organised by Recorra.

The volunteering initiative brought together employees, clients and local partners with a shared commitment to protecting the Thames environment and making a positive contribution to the local community.

Working along the Thames foreshore, volunteers helped to remove waste from the riverside environment and contribute towards a cleaner, more welcoming public space.

Six DOC Cleaning colleagues participated in the initiative: Arthur Andrews, Luke Smith, Charley Stewart, Josie Blayney, Ella McGuinness and Siggie Roberts-Twinn.

The event provided an opportunity for colleagues from different organisations to work together outside their usual roles, while supporting a shared environmental cause.

About Gabriel's Wharf

Located on London's South Bank, Gabriel's Wharf forms part of one of the capital's most vibrant riverside destinations, attracting residents, workers and visitors throughout the year.

The surrounding Thames environment plays an important role in the local area, providing a habitat for wildlife alongside the public spaces enjoyed by the wider community.

However, waste and pollutants impact these environments, creating risks for wildlife and harming the appearance of the riverside.

Beach clean initiatives help address these challenges through practical action, bringing local businesses and volunteers together to care for the places they share.

By removing litter from the foreshore, volunteers made a direct contribution towards protecting the local environment and maintaining an important part of London's riverside.

Working for a Cleaner Thames

Organised by Recorra, the beach clean gave volunteers the opportunity to take an active role in improving the local environment through hands-on litter collection.

Representatives from DOC Cleaning, CBRE and the South Bank Employers' Group worked alongside one another, collecting discarded waste from the Gabriel's Wharf area.

The combined efforts of those involved resulted in 13.1kg of litter being collected, demonstrating the tangible difference that can be achieved when organisations collaborate around a shared objective.

The initiative also highlighted the importance of businesses taking an active role in protecting their surrounding environments, extending their contributions beyond their day-to-day operations.

WHERE WE CLEANED

Recognition of Our Contribution

Following the event, DOC Cleaning received a Recognition of Service Award from Recorra, acknowledging the contribution to the Gabriel's Wharf beach clean.

The event demonstrated how practical volunteering activities can deliver measurable environmental benefits while creating opportunities for collaboration and employee engagement.

DOC Cleaning would like to thank Recorra for organising the event, alongside CBRE, the South Bank Employers' Group and all colleagues who participated.
